627,270

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

There are disclosed a method and a machine for applying a strippable paint to a large-sized product finished with a sprayed coating, such as an automobile, to form a protective film on the surface of the coating. The product is kept in for appriod of time before it is stock/and will be shipped. Contaminations such as dust are washed away from the surface of the product. Then, strippable paint is applied, preliminarily dried, and nonpreliminarily dried to form the protective film out of the strippable paint on the surface of the protective film is formed easily, appropriately, The obtained protective film has a uniform and sufficient thickness. Even if the surface contains unapplied regions to which the paint should not be applied, the paint can be applied the whole surface of the coating while avoiding the according to the invention The application can be performed easily and unapplied regions. Acertainly without leaving unapplied portions around unapplied regions.

ri

Ę.,